2. The Color Run

Read an article from a Canadian newspaper about a paint race in London, Ontario in Canada. Then tick the correct answers (a, b or c).

The Color Run to bring a rainbow mess to London

By Mike Donachie

People throwing things at you when you're running down the street is never going to be good, right?

Well, sometimes it can be.

The Color Run is coming to London for the first time to celebrate health, happiness, individuality and getting messy.

The popular event – which, to explain its spelling, began in the United States – is to be held at the Western Fair District on Aug. 17.

It sees runners of all ages, sizes and abilities start in all-white clothing and ends with them looking like human rainbows, after different shades of coloured powder are thrown at runners along the route.

It's all in aid of local charities, and London's beneficiaries will be the Tara "Boom" Houston Children's Foundation, which gives financial help to the families of sick kids.

"The Color Run is all about having fun and healthy living, while giving back to local charities," said founder Travis Snyder. "The event brings the community together and creates energy so positive it's contagious. Our mantra is 'Be Happy. Be Healthy. Be You!'"

Registration is open for teams and individuals. Visit www.thecolorrun.com/canada.

Color Run ins and outs:

- There's no winner and nobody's timed.
- This year, there will be more than 100 Color Run events and an estimated one million participants.
- More than 60 per cent of "Color Runners" are first-time 5K* runners and participate as a celebration of their healthy living accomplishments.

Hi guys ... Any plans for tonight? I want to go to the new Johnny Depp movie ... 😊 (Richard, 6:28 pm)

Count me in. (Franjo, 6:29 pm)

Sorry Rich, I've got to finish my presentation on ice hockey. (Mike, 6:31 pm)

It's playing at Cinestar. I checked the schedule: starts at 7:45 pm. (Barha, 6:35 pm)

Depp again! 😏 No thanks! Let's hang out at Ginny's! (Maximilian, 6:37 pm)

Come on Max, I've heard it's good. (Franjo, 6:38 pm)

By the way: It's only 5 $ tonight. (Barha, 6:39 pm)

Whoever wants to come along – let's meet at the entrance at 7:30. (Richard, 6:42 pm)

Alright - homework's finished. See you there. (Maximilian, 6:44 pm)

I can't make it. Tennis lesson starts at 8:15 pm. (Tory, 6:47 pm)

5. Animal News

Read the short news reports about animals (0 to 4). Then match the headlines (a to f) with the news reports. There is one more headline than you need.

0. Celebrate turtles and learn about ways to help them for the 16th annual World Turtle Day (23 May). The day was created by American Tortoise Rescue (ATR), but has grown so much that it is celebrated around the world now. Turtles are reptiles that have been swimming in our oceans for at least 110 million years. Sadly, experts say that many species of turtle could die out in the next 50 years.	c
1. You might have heard of adults taking time off work after having a baby, but what about when they get a new pet? In New Zealand, new pet owners are being given paw-ternity leave – paid time off to help their new animal arrivals settle in. That means getting them used to a new home, new neighbours and a new area. Some companies in Britain allow their employees time off to care for their pets, but there's no law in place just yet.
2. By the end of today, all dogs and puppies over eight weeks old in the UK must be microchipped by law. Microchipping is when a tiny chip with your details and your pet's details is injected under their skin. It's a simple procedure that is just like having an injection. The details on the chip are then stored on a national database. If your dog gets lost or is involved in an accident, vets can scan their chip and find out who they belong to.
3. A new study released by WWF's Wear it Wild campaign has found that millions of us (kids, teenagers and adults!) are unaware of how many of the world's most loved animals are in trouble. Charlotte Bagg, WWF's Wear it Wild spokesperson, said, "These results show that we need to do more to inform people and allow them to feel empowered to protect our precious species."
4. The PDSA have warned that nearly half a million dogs are still being fed human chocolate, even though it's really bad for them. Pet owners are being warned to keep their Easter treats away from their dogs at the weekend. The charity's latest PDSA Animal Wellbeing Report reveals that 5% of dogs have been fed human chocolate despite it being toxic and potentially life-threatening.

f) Your pet needs to have an implanted ID

6. Pedal Power

Read the internet article about an American school and tick the correct statement (a, b, c or d).

Pedal power in schools

Martin Middle School in North Carolina, USA, has introduced pedal power into their classrooms to get pupils to focus more. Bike pedals have been put under the desks as a way to divert students' energy. Bethany Lambeth, who teaches maths at the school, said it has led to a significant increase in their performance and grades. "Because students are sitting still all day long they start to get restless and start tapping their desks and their feet are moving about", she said. Having the quiet bike pedals under the desks allows students to use up that energy, and at the same time focus on class.
